ACADEMIC TOOLS

Emailing Professors

By NC State University

You will likely need to communicate with your instructor via email at various points in your college career, oftentimes to arrange meetings, ask simple questions, or make polite requests. Though not an in-person interaction, a well written email can still help you to build a relationship with your professor and benefit your progress in the course. In fact, when professors receive polite, professional emails (as opposed to overly casual, presumptive messages), they are more likely to feel motivated to work with the sender and perceive the student as more likely to succeed.

When to Email vs. When to Meet in Person

Email

- Scheduling a meeting
- Clarifying deadlines, requirements, assignments, etc.
- Replying to an email from your instructor that requires a response

In Person

- Asking in-depth questions about assignments or course content
 - Reviewing an exam, quiz, paper, etc.
 - Discussing your grade

Do's and Don'ts

Do:

- Add a subject
- Use a salutation ("Dear Professor Smith")
 - Use proper grammar and spelling
 - Write in full sentences
- Include your name, course, and section number
- Acknowledge a reply ("Thank you for your help")

Don't:

- Ask questions that have already been answered
 - Send before proofreading
 - Expect an immediate reply
- Complain about a grade or course policy; it's best to have that conversation in person

MILITARY TO CIVILIAN

Also, we will be setting up our annual Field of Flags display for Veterans Day at the Library Quad on Friday, November 8th at 4pm. If you'd like to volunteer to help, please sign up in the Veterans Center.
